David Meth's riveting new play, To the Death of My Own Family, features Farah Bala in an internationally acclaimed one-woman performance. Meth's harrowing work tells of an Afghan-American woman who returns with her immigrant family to Afghanistan, only to witness the carnage of her entire family. Upon her return to the US, she is interrogated as a suspect, detained, humiliated and forced to justify her journey east in order to reclaim her citizenship. Meth's timely play is a story of war and a chronicle of the suffering one bears when human rights are violated.
